

The Diplomat's Handbook is a project commissioned by the Community of Democracies, and produced by the Council for a Community of Democracies with the financial support of the International Center on Nonviolent Conflict, Freedom House, the Princeton Project on National Security, the U.S. Department of State, the Government of India, and the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade of the Government of Canada.

The Handbook project was conceived by Ambassador Mark Palmer. Preparation of the Handbook has been a partnership between project Head Ambassador Jeremy Kinsman (jkinsman@princeton.edu) who has been principally responsible for the text of the Handbook itself, and the Director of Research, Kurt Bassuener (kurtbassuener@yahoo.com), who has been principally responsible for producing the accompanying case studies.

The project benefits from the active partnership of the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs of Princeton University whose graduate students have conducted extensive research and prepared written drafts for country case-studies, namely Bryan Crawford-Garrett, Hanna Jung, Britt Lake, and Taya Weiss. Veteran Canadian Foreign Service officers Paddy Marsden-Dole and Terry Jones drafted the Tanzania case study. The Nepal case study was drafted by Pranav Budhathoki.

The text which follows and the case-studies benefit from the generous contributions and advice of many former and current diplomatic practitioners, scholars, members of policy centers and experienced non-governmental organizations, and development experts.

Designed and produced by the Office of External Affairs, Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University, in collaboration with the Council for a Community of Democracies.
